ARCHITECTURAL PHOTOGRAPHY

I have been shooting high-end architectural images for many years all over the UK.

I have worked for successful architects, construction companies, commercial developers, furniture manufacturers and interior designers. I use perspective control lenses where appropriate to keep verticals straight and enhance composition.

Exterior:

When shooting any building I will consider its orientation and how it sits within its environment.

I will always ask questions before producing a shooting plan and will need to understand your matrix with regard to optimum weather and urgency.

Jonathan has been my photographer of choice over many years, always producing interesting and relevant images for client presentations and our own Architectural Practice portfolios. In addition to the more creative images we have also required high quality photographs for montage work. Jonathan has consistently produced these technically demanding images on time and within budget.

Interior:

I have found that how well an area is 'dressed' contributes hugely to producing successful interior images. I take great effort to ensure that the areas I am shooting are looking their best.

I am used to working under pressure in occupied buildings, producing the images my clients require on-time and within budget.

I work quickly, carefully and courteously.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY

Location:

A goodly amount of commercial photography is away from the studio. I have all the kit required to shoot almost anything on location.

I am used to working within construction sites, engineering workshops, professional kitchens, dockyards and on board ships etc. You get the picture, I have been around.

As a design consultant my reputation is at stake every time I commission work. I only use expert and reliable professionals and when photography is required I invariably turn to Jonathan Kelly (Pixov.com). I have found he quickly understands and interprets the design brief and produces images that are technically and creatively first class.

Chris Griffiths:
Client Service Director: Agile Creative

Studio:

Working within the design environment I have shot for national advertising campaigns, front of pack for food packaging and a good deal of below the line promotional campaigns.

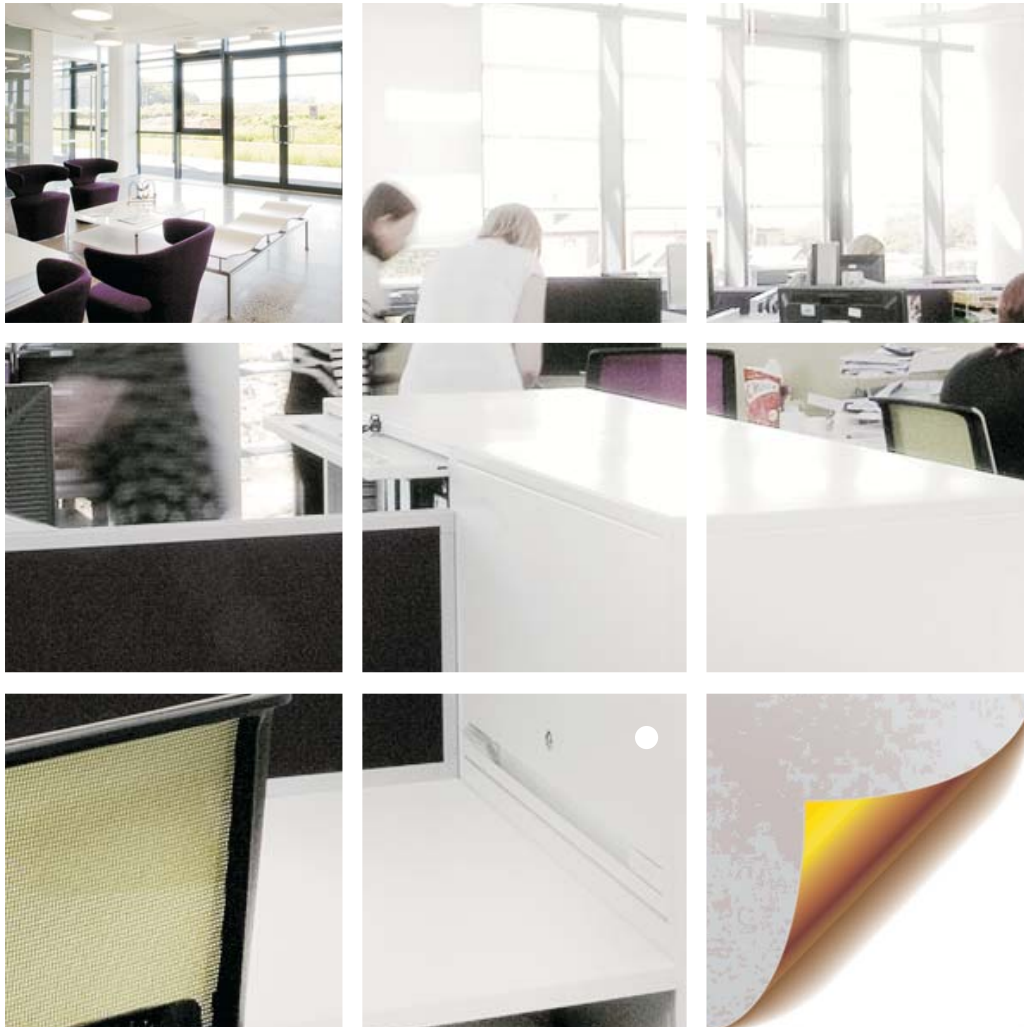

I have a small in-house studio suitable for pack-shots, small advertising and table top images. If this area is not large enough for your needs I will hire a larger space to meet your needs.

I have been doing this since Noah was a lad. Now working from Maidstone in Kent I can offer London quality and experience at local prices.
